I made this nifty sight seeing map for DC on the 6th. Even put my favorite pizza place on there in case you all get hungry. (media.patriots.win)

2 Good map but we need a map of where NOT to come in from... We need a map by a patriot..of which direction to come in from (away from blm/antifa), where to park.....which streets or zones to avoid..etc.

1 Let me see how I can edit it. I'm familiar with DC and the left side are the bridges from VA. Maryland entrances are pretty much all other borders outlined on the map.

1 Thx! And thx for taking the time! We should enter from Virginia then? Or at least park on the Virginia side of the city? Where most likely will the degenerates be congregating or entering from? Are there streets to avoid?

1 no problem, I reposted a better map here: <https://thedonald.win/p/11ROGugfK4/attention-pedes-attending-on-16-/c/>
▼ regarding where to enter...are you driving in? You won't be able to walk in from VA unless you're fine with a really long walk (could park in Rosslyn and walk across the key bridge then head downtown but it's a far walk). You could park in VA and take the metro in.
If you plan on driving, entrances to DC are all through the bridges so it really depends what time and when you're arriving. I've heard other pedes mention that they think the mayor will close the bridges from VA to DC....I would personally be surprised if this happens but you never know and it is a risk since all entrances to DC via VA are via a bridge if driving. The MD side as you can see on the map is just a ton of streets so it'd be impossible for them to close down all the roads. Areas to avoid would be the south and east on the newer map where i have arrows outlined. Generally speaking though if you stay close to the mall you should be fine, there's a few blocks dedicated to BLM plaza which is the only place close to the mall i expect antifa/BLM to congregate. Hope this helps!
